PEKIN DUCK EXCELS ALL OTHER BREEDS

Pekin Duck, Hardy and Useful.

After about three years of perseverance and hard work, remunerated with good profits from chicken eggs. the Fekin, which pays me better. as my husband is a great breeder of fine cattle, and our well cultivated grounds having a large portion of well-kept meadows for his cattle to roam on, and finding that around us was a great demand for duck's eggs and young ducklings for table purposes, 1 appropriated part of a meadow and tried my hand at breeding and rearing ducks; which I shall never regret having undertaken, as it is now carried on more extensively than was the case when I first started.

This is owing in some measure to the fact that instead of the demand for ducklings ceasing, as formerly, after the green peas are over, it continues up to October and indeed almost the entire year.

The prejudice that many farmers have against ducks is dying out and it is found that provided they are fairly treated, they certainly prove as profitable as other varieties of poul-

But do not be impressed with the delusion that ducks will, like geese, live to a great age and be as prolific over damp droppings in a dirty house. when ten years old as they are at two. To make my profits from duckkeeping, in which I succeed extremely well, both out of their eggs and selling young ducklings, the stock birds are to be young; as far as possible consist of March-hatched birds, and never more than two years old.

Keep a drake two years of age, mating three ducks to each drake, for breeding. All ducks that are selected are broad-backed birds, not excessively heavy or large, as I find that big birds seldom lay well and their eggs, as a rule, are infertile.

Even as I commenced with a small run for ducks, I kept them to great advantage. I started with a piece of ground 12 by 6 yards fenced in, in which I maintained 20 ducks as a start and kept them in health and show condition. A cemented pond 5 by 5 feet was provided, one foot deep, but the water was changed twice a week. A small, low house was erected, the floor of which was strewn with straw, which was often changed.

In feeding my ducks, which were thus far kept in confinement, their first meal was composed of meal and middlings, mixed into a crumbly paste with hot water, and in the evening whole grain is given, alternating oats, wheat or barley, so as to make a variety.

These grains are always thrown into a pan of water, in the bottom of which is placed some sand or grit, and this must not be omitted as it helps to keep them in condition and is a great help to digestion. Broken up oyster shells and old, pounded mortar is also given them.

A little meat three times a week I find very advisable, as well as grass and other green foods. When I hatch a brood of ducklings for the table I never keep them too long before they are killed and they are invariably ready for selling for eating at ten weeks of age. If kept longer they soon commence to moult and lose flesh. There are many varieties for me to select from and I tried several. The Aylesbury I found to grow and mature quickly, and of good quality of flesh, but the Pekin excels all others, both for eggs and flesh. And a cross between the Aylesbury

CARING FOR TURKEY FLOCKS

Fowls Should Not Be Encouraged to Loaf About Kitchen Door for Tid Bits-Feed Regularly.

Turkeys should not be encouraged to come about the kitchen door for tid bits. The health of this fowl requires that it exercise. Far better have a flock of turkeys that come up only at roosting time than a flock hanging around the kitchen door. Feed regularly twice a day when the range food is gone, and give all the sour milk that can be spared, says, Wallace's Farmer. See that they have no lice, and that their roosts are free from mites. They should be sheltered in an open shed, but better roost in the trees than in the chicken house unless conditions are unusually favorable and ventilation good. Turkeys are very susceptible to bad air and poor ventilation. They will come down with roup if allowed to roost

Do not try to fatten in confinement. If they are to be marketed, let them eat corn with the pigs, and see that him." they have all they can eat for the three or four weeks just before Thanksgiving. A dose of epsom salts given once a month is good for the two birds in the mash. Provide plenty of grit and charcoal, and all the onions available-tops and bulbs as

AVOID DISEASE IN POULTRY

Practical Methods for Prevention and Treatment Given by Agricultural Department Expert.

Dr. George Byron Morse, United States department of agriculture, has given practical methods for the prevention and treatment of disease in poultry that can be conveniently followed on most farms. We summarize them here:

1. Clean out by giving Epsom salts. 2. Clean up by spreading powdered air-slacked lime.

3. Clean the water supply by adding permanganate of potash.

4. Clean the food by preventing contamination or heating.

5. Clean the eggs by dipping in grain alcohol.

6. Clean incubators and brooders by scrubbing with hot water and soap. 7. Clean the breeding by using young females.

> Use Aeroplanes to Hunt Seals. Difficulty experienced this past season in locating seal herds in northern waters has caused the owners of sealing ships to give serious consideration to employing aeroplanes-in next year's hunt. These craft of the air, they believe, can scout more cheaply and with less waste of time than the sealing ships themselves. Small aeroplanes, designed especially for the purpose, are looked upon as entiraly feasible. Through their use, seal herds will be located and reported to the vessel, which can then make for the spot indicated.
